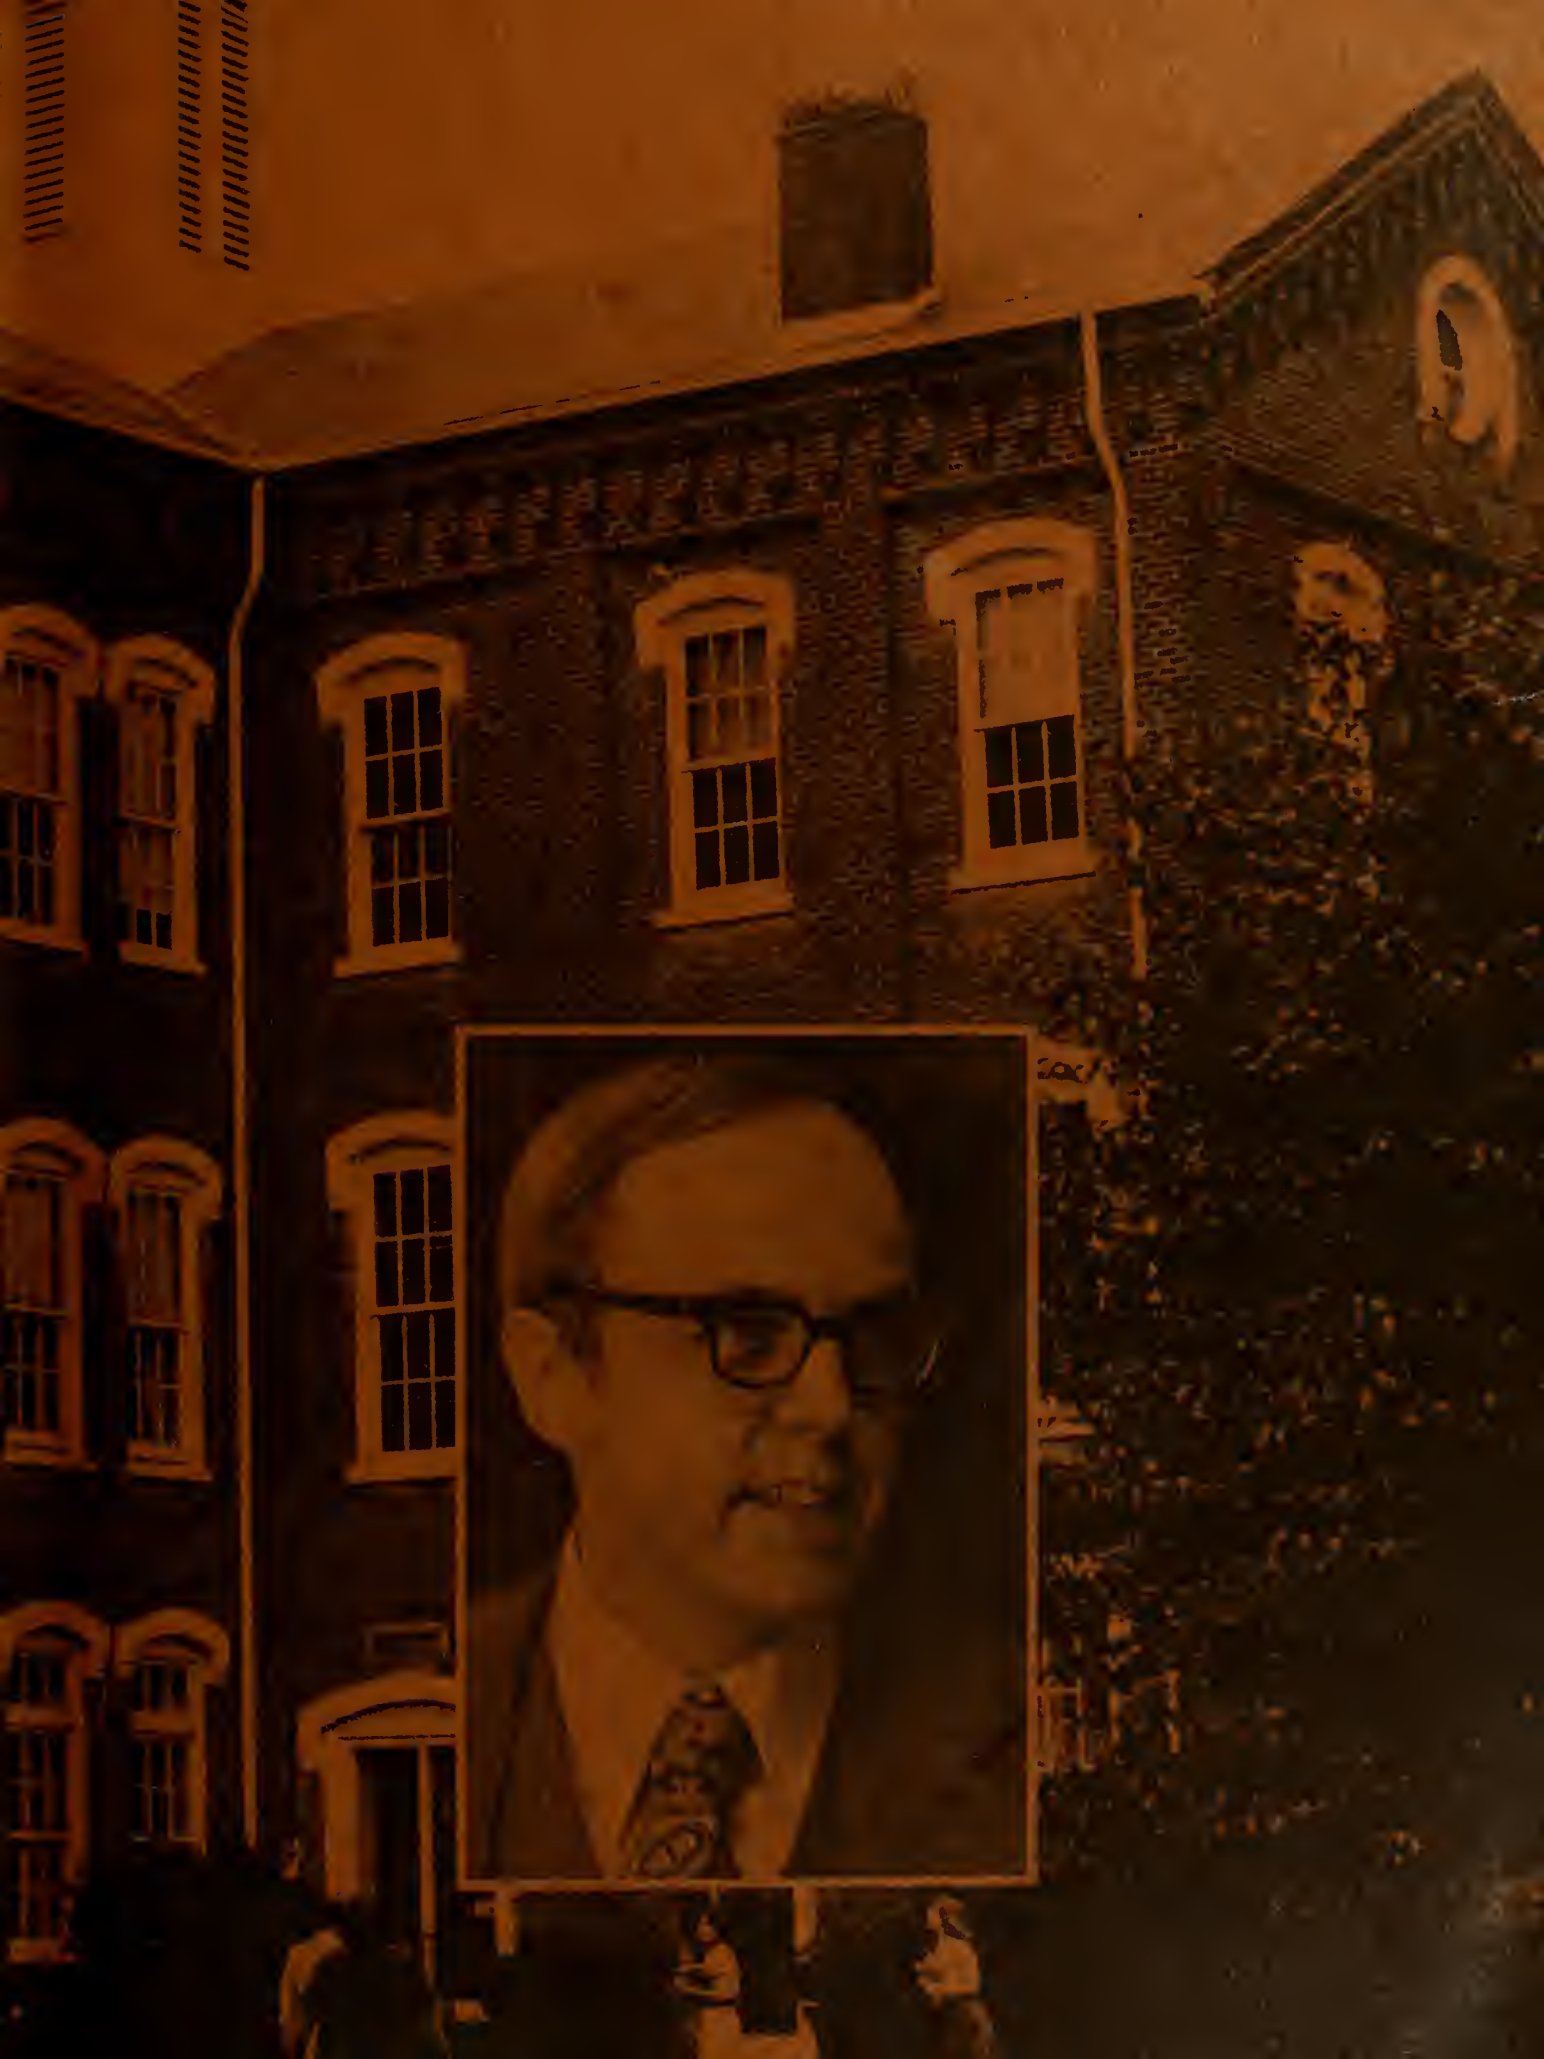
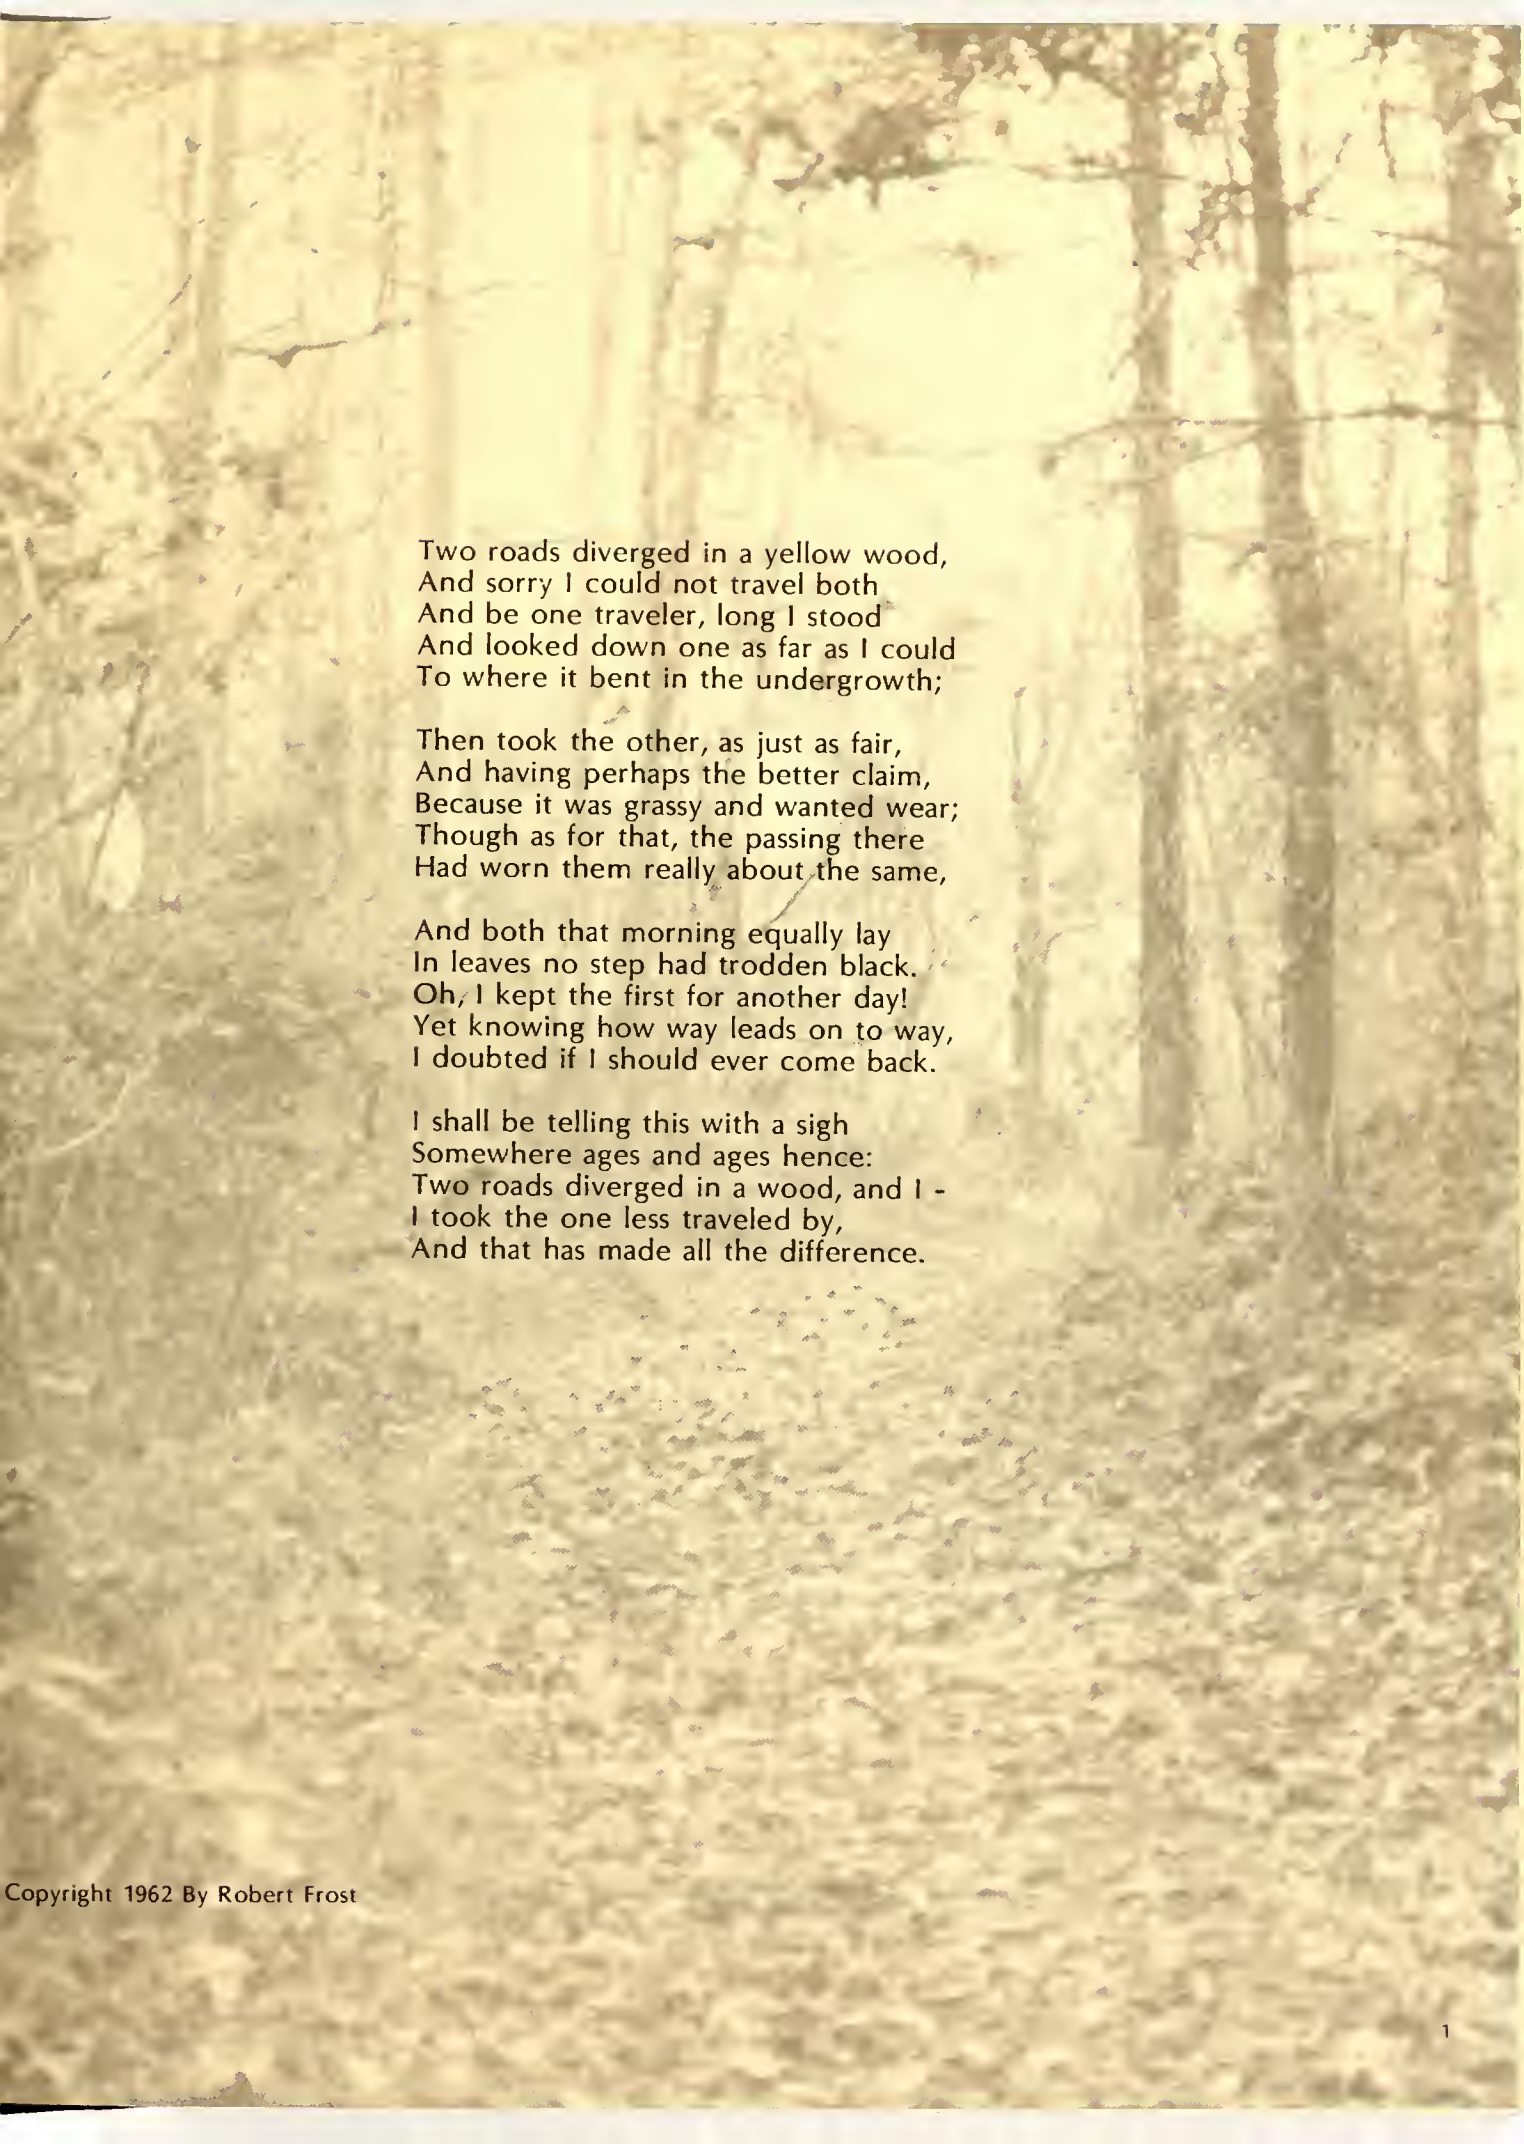
CHILHOWEAN





Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could
To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that, the passing there
Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I -
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.

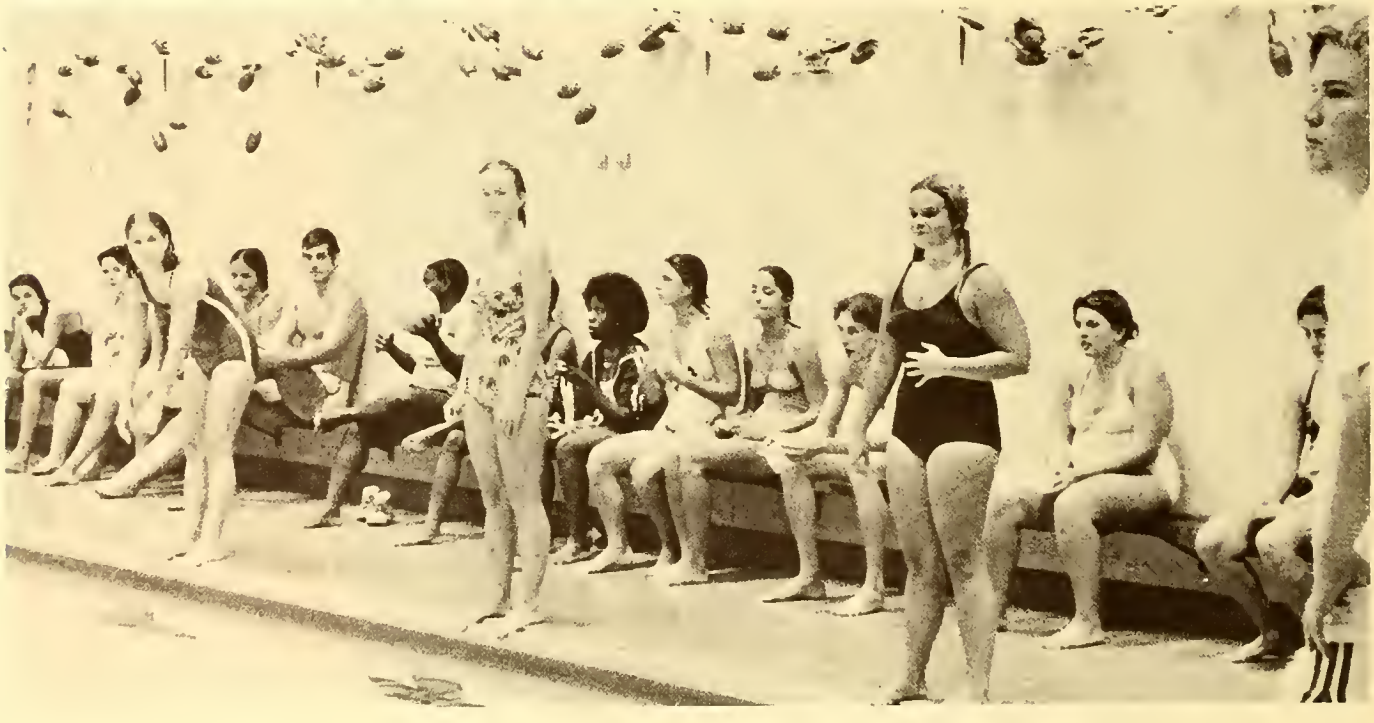
New Student Orientation



On September 6, 1977, we arrived — excited, energetic, perhaps slightly bewildered. Then began the week-long phenomenon known as new student orientation, and we slowly became acquainted with Maryville College and with each other. In this week of learning and fellowship, we became prepared for our four-year college experience.

We were first organized into study groups, where we began to find out about college life. We learned about our fellow group members and shared our opinions. We wrote essays and took placement tests in math, English, languages, music, and swimming. We researched college history and learned traditional college songs. We finally discussed course offerings and core requirements, and, with the help of faculty advisors we registered for fall term.

But our study groups did more than study. Groups competed against each other in various games and activities — including volleyball, tennis, softball, swimming, ping pong, frisbee, chess, and checkers. We sang, danced, partied, and just enjoyed the fellowship. We had our own choir. We had a square dance, a Friday night party, and a Saturday night semi-formal dinner. Sunday brought a trip to Tremont, where we hiked, threw frisbees, ate a picnic supper, and sang around the campfire. The week was culminated with the academic convocation.

The week was a valuable experience for us. It helped us adjust to this change in our lives. We became familiar with all aspects of the college before we started classes, and we got to know each other and many of our teachers. In short, this week effectively prepared us for our future here at Maryville College.

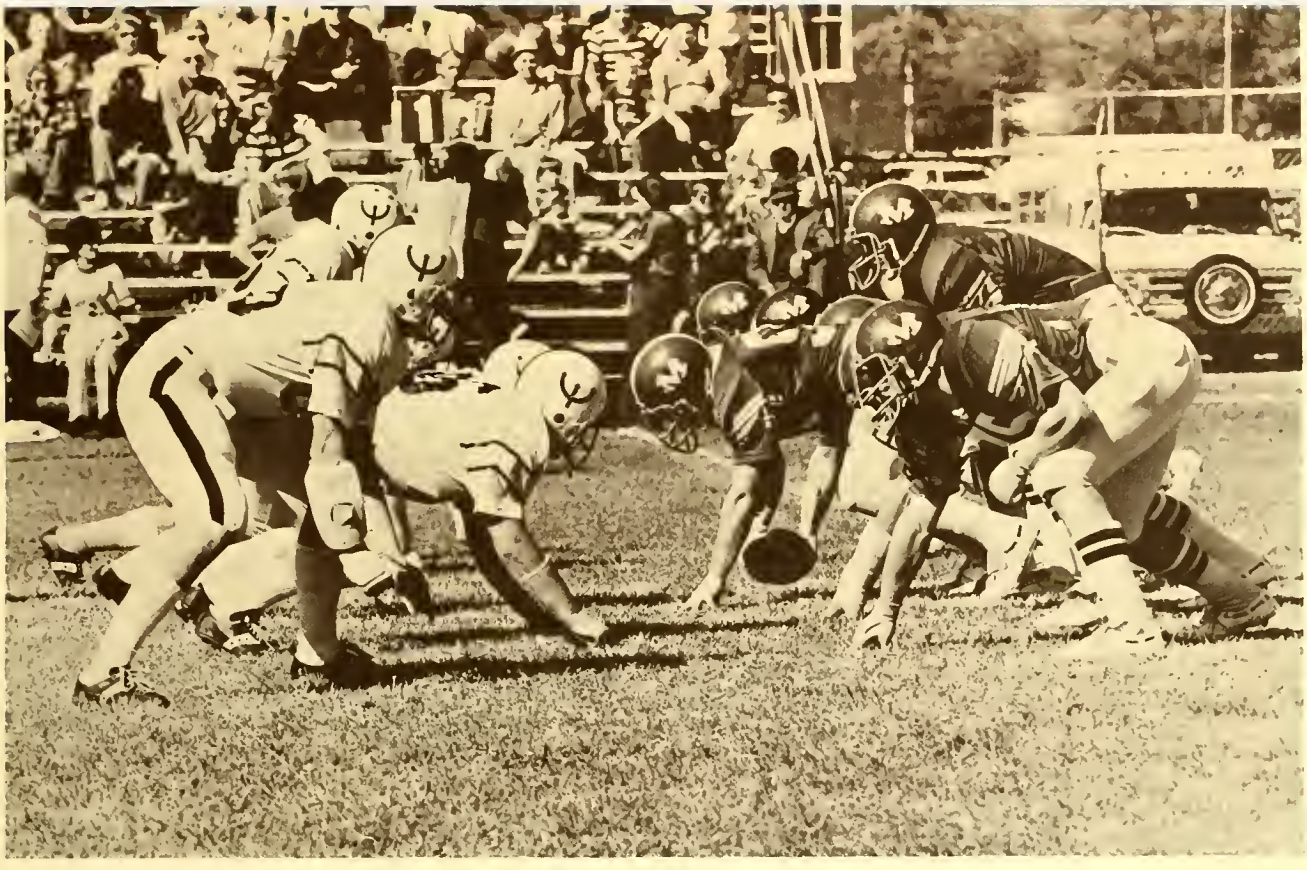
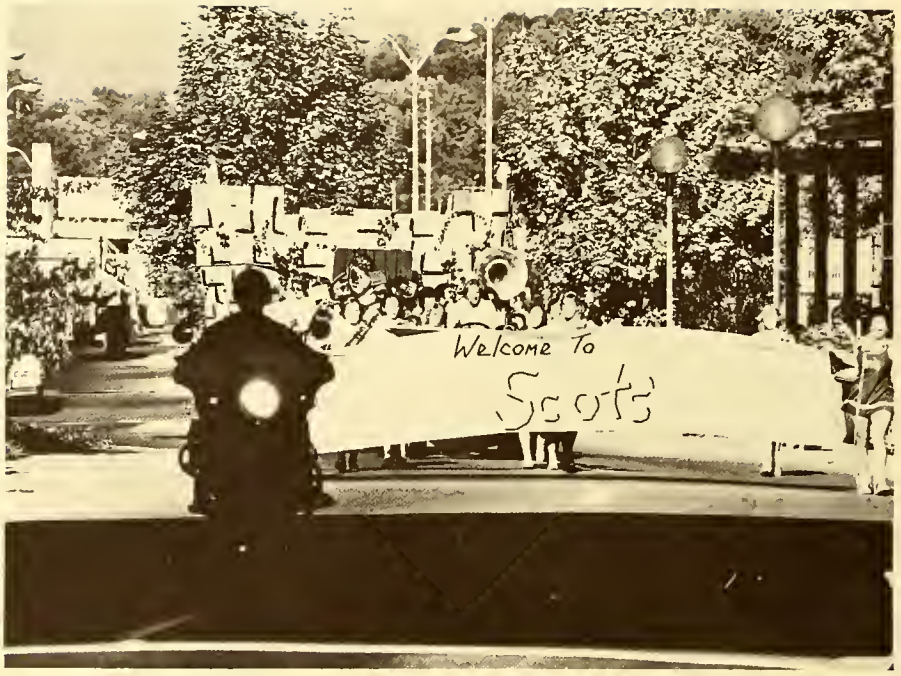
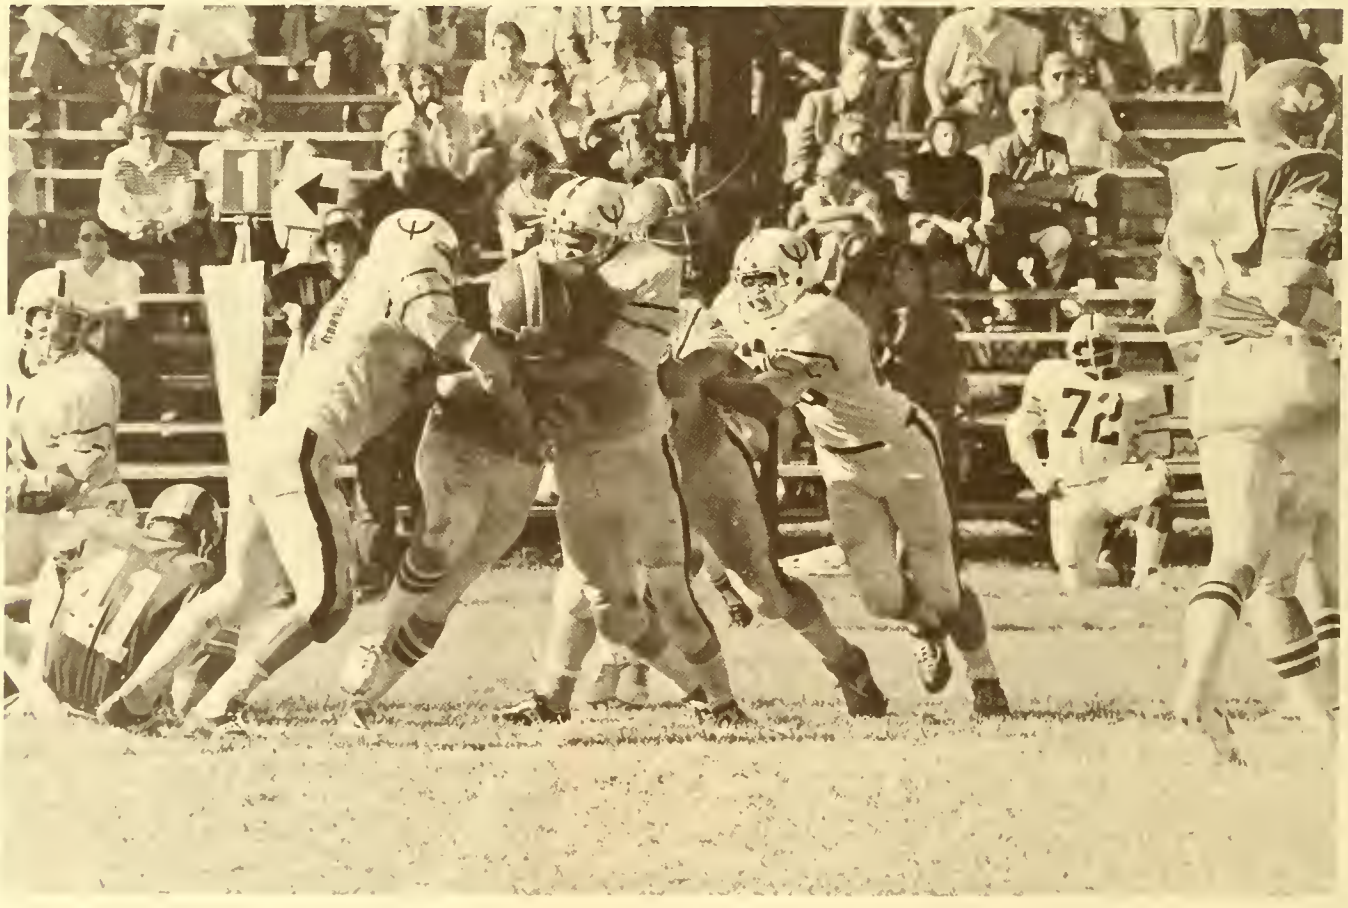
HOMECOMING



Homecoming weekend, Oct. 22, was filled with exciting events. The fun began Friday with the Homecoming Parade. Saturday brought the annual Faculty Wives' Craft Fair and the Parents' Day Breakfast. The Homecoming game against Bluefield State began at 2:00 and the Scots won 42 to 0. Lou Watson Horner was crowned Homecoming Queen during the half-time activities. The events culminated with the Homecoming Dance Saturday night.





Foriegn Students

Everything is new and exciting for me! I am now in America, a country 25 times as big as my homeland, Japan. Living in a foreign country has been my long-cherished desire since childhood. I am lucky that I could get the opportunity to realize my dream in my youth.

Americans are very friendly, and everyone naturally greets me with a warm smile and a "Hi! How are you?" when we pass on the campus, even though the other student may not know me at all. I am particularly impressed by the friendly, informal relationships between college freshmen and upperclassmen. In a Japanese university, freshmen students traditionally regard their older classmates with deference, always addressing them with great formality and respect. On the contrary, American students look upon one another as equals, regardless of academic status, and freely and frequently engage in friendly conversation.

Other differences I have noted between American students and their Japanese counterparts are attitudes toward education and classroom behavior. For example, although Japanese high school students work very hard, college students, except for the intellectually elite who intend to go on to graduate school, tend to be lazy and more interested in social life than in academic pursuits. In contrast, the American students I have observed are serious and hard-working. As for classroom behavior, the Japanese student rarely engages in dialogue with his instructor, while the American student is encouraged to participate actively in questioning sessions and discussions.

Now I will confess my problems as a foreign student. At first, I was discouraged and down many times because the teachers all spoke too rapidly. Fortunately, I have become more used to the English idiom. However, speaking English still is my greatest problem; for example, while I am looking for the words to express my opinions or questions on one subject, the teacher begins to talk about another. The same thing happens in converstations with my American friends. I love the variety of character found in America, and I am eager to get to know people, but sometimes my lack of words causes misunderstanding. I appreciate my American friends' kind explanations to me whenever I have trouble understanding English. How I wish I could rapidly speak out my feelings and thoughts in English as I do in my native language! I could get to know Americans much better.

Living outside my homeland, I have come to have a stronger consciousness of being Japanese. To my surprise, some Americans unexpectedly talk to me in Japanese, although they speak in fragments. Others, anxious to know about Japan, ask me a variety of questions ranging from dating habits to serious political and economic matters. Although I cannot answer every question put to me about Japan, I enjoy talking about my homeland and my native customs. In the future I hope to broaden my own knowledge about Japan as well as the United States

Interpreting

A unique feature of Maryville College is its major in interpreting for the deaf, the first such degree program in the world. The interpreting major is a four-year course of study leading to a bachelor's degree. In this program, six courses are offered in sign language and interpreting, with other required courses including pathology of hearing disorders, psychology of deafness, and counseling with deaf people. A variety of practical experience is possible through practicums and through preparation in the interpreting laboratory. The interpreter degree program prepares students for qualification and certification by the Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf, the national organization of interpreters.

Sigma Lambda Kappa is a campus organization open to all students and faculty who are interested in interpreting, sign language, deafness, or deaf people. The chief goals of this organization are as follows:

to create awareness of deafness on the M.C. campus and in the surrounding community; to provide experiences outside the classroom to enhance those in the classroom.

The SLK's activities have included: invitation of speakers to the campus, social events with deaf people (such as Christmas parties with children from the Tennessee School for the Deaf), and fund raising drives (such as the rent-a-member program) to obtain a TTY (Teleype machine) to be used by deaf students and deaf people in the community for telephone communication.

Now it stands as a faded remembrance of its past glory, when, instead of maintenance, it housed the gymnasium and the Y.M.C.A. It was completed in 1901 as the aspiration of a Japanese student, Kin Takaaski, to provide a home for the Maryville Y.M.C.A. That's how Bartlett Hall started.

Somehow one can still feel the excitement, like that in 1905 when the Maryville Basketball team, under Coach W.D. Chadwick, took the East Tennessee championship with an 8-0 record.

But then the decline started in 1921, when a regulation-size floor was built in the Alumni Gym and stole some of the glory of the now aging building.

With our multi-purpose athletic complex, one wonders how anyone could get excited about that crumbling old building as a sports center, but to an aspiring young athlete of the turn-of-the-century, it must have been a dream come true. There must have been some exciting moments in those glory days of Bartlett.

Today the paint is a little worn. The upkeep is done, but the sign standing out front somehow seems out of place in the standing of what was once one of the social hubs of campus life. For instead of a memorial or even an acknowledgment, the sign simply reads: MAINTENANCE DEPARTMENT.

Perhaps the most inviting building on campus, for a variety of architechtural and historical reasons, is Willard House. Contructed in the late 1880's as a memorial to Doctor Sylvester Willard, M.D., a wealthy and prominent physician of Auburn, New York (Dr. Willard was one of four wealthy donors who aided Maryville College in its' realizement of a $100,000.00 permanent endowment which virtually saved the college from dissolvement in 1883). Although Dr. Willard never visited the college, his wife did and contributed some $11,000.00 to erect the brick structure which was to serve as the presidents' home. The residence "memorial" as it was called was first occupied by the fourth president of Maryville College, Dr. Samuel Ward Boardman. Dr. Boardman had been a friend and neighbor of Dr. Willard, and apparently it was no coincidence that the presidential residence was built during his tenure of office.

Willard House has served in other capacities besides that of a presidential residence. Willard House was once used as a clinic with hospital rooms fitted on the second and third floors (which led to a strict adherence to a presidential bathroom schedule). Other residents besides Presidents Boardman, Wilson and Lloyd include current Assistant to the President Raymond Brahams and former Proffessor Dr. David Young.

Difficult as it is to transform a stark, twenty-room structure into a grand, elegant home, one can't help but glance at the old photographs and hope that the distinctive house will one day serve again as a home and fitting memorial as it was intended to.

It was built in 1888 after the death of Professor Thomas Jefferson Lamar, thus, the derivation of its original name, the Lamar Memorial Library. Today most students know the building well; freshmen have been known to visit it several times a day in the hope that they have missed something the first, second, third, fourth, or fifth time. The post office is one of the oldest buildings on campus and was the first one built after the original four. The history of the building is rather hard to trace — it started as a library, then about 50 to 75 years later it became the post office and bookstore. The architecture is unique with its stained-glass window and almost gothic design. It still houses the post office and the printing shop. People have been known to sit in the post office and carry on conversations for hours. It is the only place on campus where you can run into any of the students or faculty — probably the only other building on campus to compete for popularity would be the student center. But peoples days have been known to be made or broken in that little building, the direct line to the outside world and letters from home.

By: Robert M. Griener

Back in 1910 it must have been exciting to watch the construction of what was to have been and still is the male dormitory. The reputation of Carnegie is one of the oldest on campus, as is the building. The story must have been more or less the same back then. The same problem has probably plagued past generations: "What do we do on Friday nights?"

When the original Carnegie Hall was completed it was about half the present size and was probably just getting broken in when it burnt down in 1916. Using insurance money and a federal housing loan, the dorm was rebuilt in the present form and has remained a male dorm as well as one of the centers of social activity on campus. Last week there was a busload of visiting high school students on campus and several girls who had obviously heard of the dorm asked, "Is that Carnegie? We heard there are some very nice boys living in there."

Townies

Wow! I really don't know how or where to begin. There's so much I could say, but since I can't write more than a few paragraphs I'll have to be a little more general.

Being a "townie" sort of sets me apart from those students living on campus. It is more difficult and does require more effort to develop friendships with people I see only once or twice a day. A large percentage of my friends are "townies."

As a commuter I miss out on alot of different activities such as wild dorm parties and/or raids and all-night talk or study sessions. And how about mailboxes? I keep checking my box, hoping for even a small mimeographed notice. You know what's really "great"? Try checing your mailbox, which hasn't been checked since Friday afternoon, on Monday morning and finding that you've missed a meeting that was scheduled for Saturday morning. Another problem concerns three to four hour breaks between classes. Where am I supposed to go? Most of the time it's too inconvenient to go home, and I sure don't want to hide myself in some corner of the library or the student center until the next class.

Maryville College is a very nice place to be. The teachers are fantastic; they have a great relationship with the students. The students are great, too, because they are so friendly — they always say "Hi!" even if they don't know me. I need a pat on the back every once in a while, just so I know that somebody else knows and cares that I'm here. Why don't you do something nice today? Let a "townie" know that you care.

ACTION

It is not how much we have but how much we enjoy that makes happiness

I

As they moved unto the valley, a grief engulfed them, and
They acknowledged the trembling in their core:
Is there a way to leave in harmony and without deplore?
No, not without lesion in the soul shall we leave our canyon.

The solitary of the nights and the ache of the days were long
In these gorges, and who can leave their solitariness and aches
Behind them without sorrow?

Too many portions of the soul have they disseminated upon
This canyon, and too many are the young that canter through
These ravines and we do not leave without regret and pain.

It is no use pondering where the years have gone,
Time waits neither for you or us.

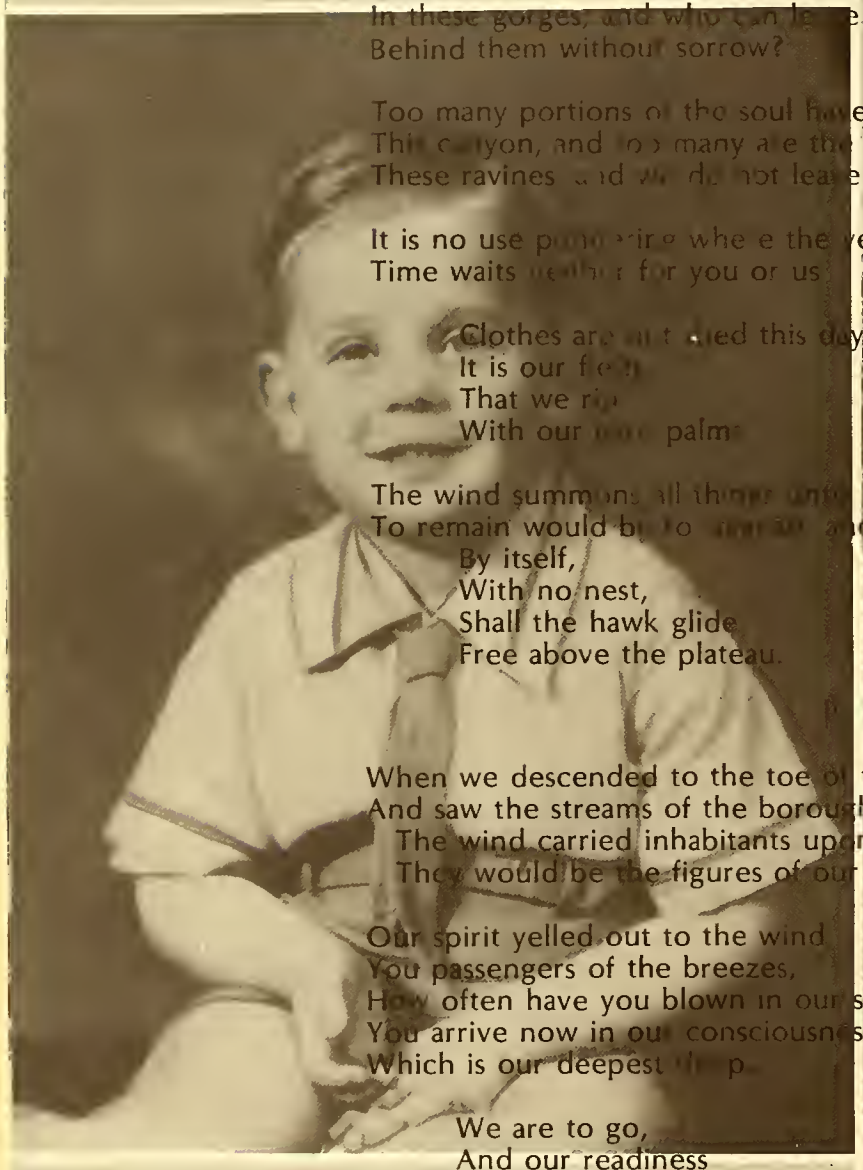
Clothes are untied this day,
It is our flesh
That we rip
With our bare palms.

The wind summons all things unto their paths, and we must go.
To remain would be to wander and be caught in our own death.
By itself,
With no nest,
Shall the hawk glide
Free above the plateau.

When we descended to the toe of the canyon, we [illegible]
And saw the streams of the boroughs [illegible] the canyon.
The wind carried inhabitants upon its bow,
They would be the figures of our new land.

Our spirit yelled out to the wind
You passengers of the breezes,
How often have you blown in our sleep
You arrive now in our consciousness
Which is our deepest [illegible]

We are to go,
And our readiness
With wings stretched,
Awaits your lift.



The canyon spake . . .
do not let the breath of the wind untie us now and the time together become but a memory. You that have stalked among the gorges, ravines, and plateaus left a spirit, and your soul has been an awakening. I have loved ya'll much.

Silent was my love, and this love knows not its own deepness until separation. I have seen this gathering search for their wind. Now that your wind has arrived . .
GO.

You have to drift in the breeze
Before you set your wings.
It is a possession
Where the wind abounds.

Before your wings
Are arched,
Drift with the breeze . .
This was done here.

III

They turned and faced the canyon.
There are no burial monuments here.
Canyon, you were a boulder and a stepping stone.
Whenever you gaze about upon your plateau where Others as us have been laid, see clearly,
And you shall look upon yourself and your children.
They will be united arm in arm.

Night has fallen.
This day comes to a close.

Goodby to you,
And the youth we have shared.

It seems but only yesterday,
That we met in a dream.

Our dream has scurried,
And our sleep is no more.

It is midday.

DR. ANDERSON

In 1819, a Dr. Isaac Anderson laid the keel for the ship that is Maryville College. In 1977, another Anderson was chosen to captain that ship.

Dr. Wayne W. Anderson, 39, a political scientist and educational administrator from Baltimore, Maryland was chosen out of a group of 160 persons to succeed Dr. Joseph Copeland. His selection was the climax of over a year of effort by a Selection Committee composed of administration, faculty, staff and students.

What sort of ship has this new Anderson been chosen to captain? One that is not without its leaks. In a newspaper article in the Maryville-Alcoa DAILY TIMES, Dr. Anderson recognized two main problems facing the college: relevance of academic programs and college finances. He cited Maryville College as being lucky in having excellent community and alumni support. He also said that offering a quality academic program, geared to the needs of the 1970's, was the most important long-range problem facing the College.

Anderson stressed the importance of the community to the College and vice versa. And almost as if to prove his point, he chose not to live at Morningside, but instead to set up residence with his family directly in the Maryville community.

This new captain expressed hope for the future.

"I'm very optimistic," he said. "I feel that the glass is half full and not half empty. One of the college's strongest assets is its people. They are a big asset — very helpful and cooperative — and one of the reasons I accepted the job."

A new and somewhat young captain for the ship. One who faces towering waves of financial problems; a difficult search for academic relevance; pockets of apathy; maintaining the integrity and tradition of Maryville College as a viable educational instituion. Not an easy sea upon which to set sail.

However, this Captain Anderson has faith in his ship and faith in its crew.

EDWIN RAY HUNTER: IN MEMORIAM

by Rick Smith

Only a few people in the present class knew of Dr. Edwin Ray Hunter. When he died of a heart attack on December 24, at age 87, most of the students were away at home on their Christmas vacations, unaware that a significant part of Maryville College history had passed before them. The legacy that he left us, however, cannot be forgotten or ignored.

A graduate of the class of 1914, Dr. Hunter was, from 1918 to 1960, professor and head of the English department: he served as a professor in some capacity until 1967. It was Dr. Hunter who instituted Comprehensive Exams, Independent Studies, and the College Honors Program. From 1930 to 1956 he served as dean of curriculum.

His ability to teach was legendary. He was truly able to inspire his students, and did so not only here but as visiting professor at numerous other colleges.

He wrote SHAKESPEARE AND COMMON SENSE in 1954; WILLIAM FAULKNER: NARRATIVE PRACTICE AND PROSE STYLE in 1973. He authored or co-authored several textbooks, and also wrote several authoritative articles in leading magazines in his field.

He helped to found Highland Presbyterian Church, and was a faithful and concerned member for many years.

The Edwin R. Hunter Scholarship Fund and Edwin R. Hunter Library Collection were established in his name.

So many honors were heaped upon Edwin Ray Hunter during his lifetime that it would be impossible to list them here. But what will be remembered most, particularly by the people who knew him or were taught by him in his 49 year career with Maryville College, is the way he was as a person. A favorite pastime of his was rewriting famous poems as he thought other poets would have written them. (And he possessed such knowledge and skill, that these playthings were convincing when he finished with them.) He was able to take a subject often considered old and dry and make it seem fresh and alive.

Remembered also will be the pixieish sparkle in his eyes, and the life and fire with which he taught or spoke — neither of which was seen to diminish with the passing of years. Remembered will be his dedication both to his subject and to his students — or perhaps dedication is not a fitting word. It takes more than dedication to teach English for 49 years. It takes love.

And Dr. Hunter will be remembered as a man with a lot of love.

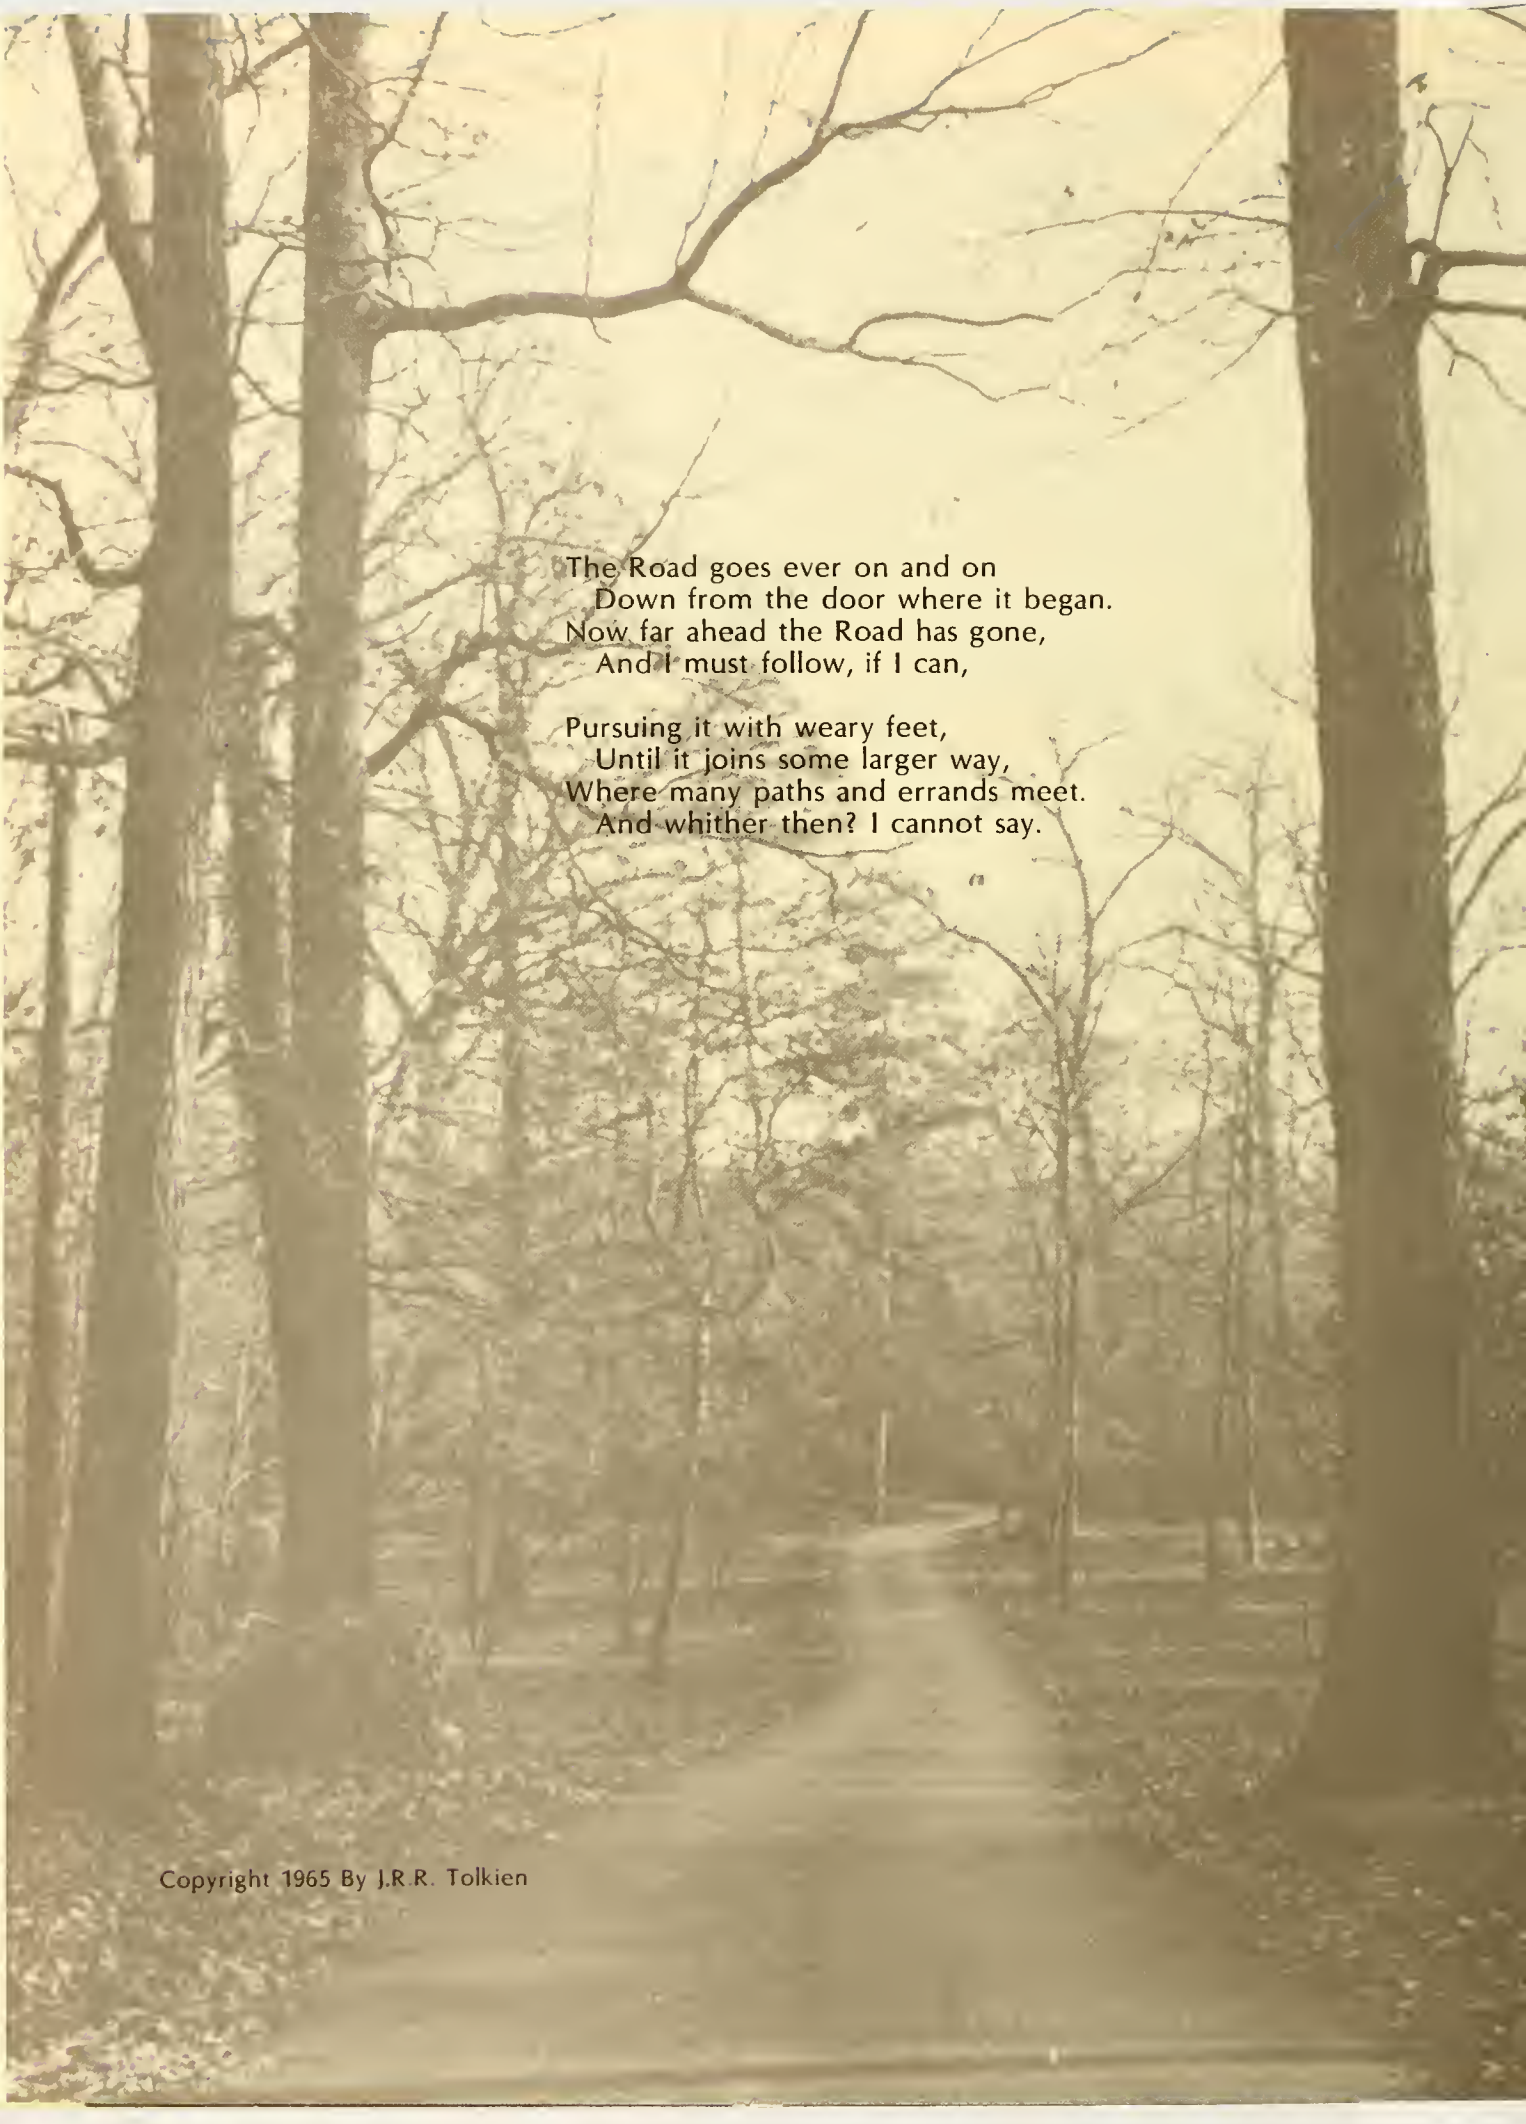
PEARSONS HALL



The Road goes ever on and on
  Down from the door where it began.
Now far ahead the Road has gone,
  And I must follow, if I can,

Pursuing it with weary feet,
  Until it joins some larger way,
Where many paths and errands meet.
  And whither then? I cannot say.
